

Ian MacNiven, Shoulder and Elbow Fellow 2016-2017

After Seattle, I returned to Canada to join a general Orthopaedic practice at Stanton Territorial Hospital in Yellowknife. Here I provide care to some of Canada's most remote individuals in communities where temperatures can drop to -50 degrees Fahrenheit in the wintertime.

My partner Sara and I have travelled extensively in the North taking advantage of the long days in the land of the midnight sun. In the winter we enjoy cross-country skiing, ice hockey, kite skiing, and have even tried our hands at dog sledding.

My practice is varied with 40-50% being shoulder and elbow, and the remainder hip and knee arthroplasty and trauma. I have continued my research interests on surgical training, infection prevention in total joint arthroplasty, and improving remote access to specialist care.

Looking forward to our next reunion!
